

Confronting Canadian Migration History means two things. First, engaging with the history of population movements into, through, and from this territory, and their importance for our history as a multiethnic settler society. This has been one of the central projects of migration historians in Canada in recent decades. Second, to make and maintain a place for that historical knowledge in contemporary discussions of migration, and in doing so confront the present with the past. That latter goal is at the heart of this collection, which assembles in one volume fifteen texts published on ActiveHistory.ca over the last four years.

With contributions by: Michael Akladios, David Atkinson, Stephanie Bangarth, Ben Bryce, Sarah Carter, Karen Dubinsky, Edward Dunsworth, Andrea Eiding, Aitana Guia, Benjamin Hoy, Franca Iacovetta, Laura Ishiguro, Sonya de Laat, Ryan McKenney, Laura Madokoro, and Jan Raska.

The Active History ebook series brings together some of the best writing published on ActiveHistory.ca in an accessible, open-access format. Its thematic collections focus on connecting historians to the public and the past to current events.

ISBN 978-1-9990201-2-5

9 781999 020125

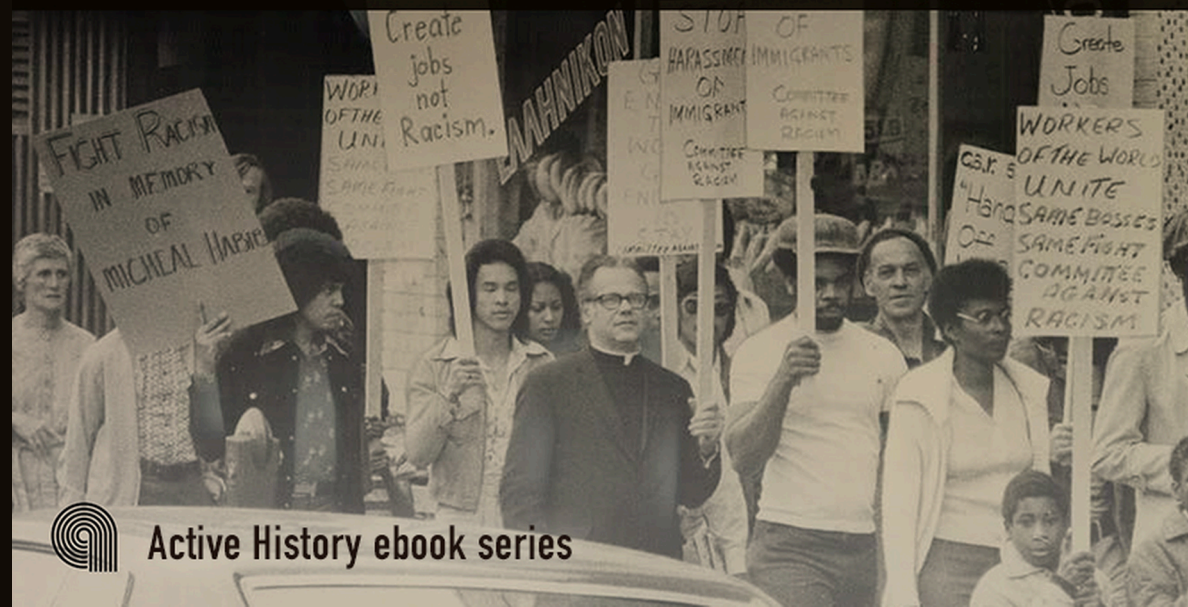

Confronting Canadian Migration History

Edited by Daniel Ross

Confronting Canadian Migration History

Daniel Ross

Active History ebook series